INUVIK ARCTIC COLLEGE LOSES BUSINESS COURSE

(CBC) Students of the Introduction to Business Program at the Inuvik Campus of Arctic College will have to go to Fort Smith if they want to continue. There were plans to offer the next step, a certificate course in business, at the college next year. But the president of Arctic College says it has not been approved and he doesn't expect any more money in the budget to hold it. Bill Stapleton says students in Inuvik will have to go to the Fort Smith campus if they want to take the two year certificate program. The Introduction to Business Management course was the first offer at the new Inuvik campus. Fifteen students are enrolled in the course.
