

INTRODUCTION

The terminology that appears in this publication was generated by full-time and part-time students of the Interpreter/Translator Program between September 1990 and March 1992. The intention was both to provide a learning experience for the students as well as to provide a resource tool for all Dene interpreter/translators.

In some cases terms have been checked by Language Bureau or freelance interpreter/translators but in most cases they have only been agreed upon by two or three students. The English words were identified from topics covered in class and not all were translated. The books were printed with plenty of space for people to make notes, additions, corrections and deletions. Any revisions would be welcomed by this program for future publications.

I would like to thank my students and the many resource people who contributed to these terminology lists. In a way they have participated in an historic event which will help to preserve Dene languages and to keep them alive. I hope people will find the terminology lists both useful and interesting.
